IDHS continues to monitor severe weather aftermath

The Indiana Department of Homeland Security (IDHS) Emergency Operations Center (EOC) is closely monitoring conditions resulting from the weather system that moved through the state yesterday.

Power outages, flooded roadways, downed trees and power lines, wind related accidents, and damage to structures have been reported. At peak power outage, 140,777 customers were without power. There are now 24,322 customers without power.

The squall-line and weather system that brought yesterday's severe weather has moved out of the state; however, the EOC continues to monitor rivers statewide for potential flooding.

As of 1 p.m. Thursday, February 12, 2009, there have been no local requests for resources for the EOC.
